CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton &amp; Co.

Side splitting humor and tear compelling pathos struggle for supremacy in this delightful romance of Cape Cod, written by a son of Cape Cod's own sandy soil. Read of the old sea captain who has returned to spend the remainder of his days among his boyhood friends; read of the quaint little wife who came to him unbidden and of the place she won in his heart; read of the pretty schoolteacher, the sanctimonious congressman, the grow-up boys Asaph Tidditt and Bailey Bangs; read of Keturah and Cap'n Josiah Dimick and Lem Myrick and all the other quaint folk of Bayport and you will find entertainment a-plenty.
There was only one Charles Dickens, but in character delineation Joseph C. Lincoln has a touch worthy of the master.

SYNOPSIS.

Congressman Heman Atkins wants to buy Cy Whittaker's place. Cy unexpectedly returns to his boyhood home.
Every one in Bayport venerates and fears Atkins except Cy. Atkins opposes the selection of Miss Phoebe Dawes as teacher.
Cy champions Phoebe Dawes against Atkins, and she is elected teacher. Cy engages Mrs. Beasley as housekeeper.
Cy discharges Mrs. Beasley. Emily Richards Thomas, aged eight, arrives at Cy's place.

CHAPTER VII.

THAT evening when Asaph and Bailey, coming for their usual call, peeped in at the window they were astounded by the tableau in the Whittaker sitting room.
Captain Cy was seated in the rocking chair which had been his grandfather's. At his feet, on the walnut cricket with a haircloth top, sat a little girl turning over the leaves of a tattered magazine, a Godey's Lady's Book. A pile of these magazines was beside her on the floor. The captain was smiling and looking over her shoulder. The cat was curled up in another chair. The room looked more homelike than it had since its owner returned to it.

The friends entered without knocking. Captain Cy looked up, saw them and appeared embarrassed.
"Hello, boys!" he said. "Glad to see you. Come right in. Clearin' off fine, ain't it?"

"We—we didn't know you had company, Whit," said Asaph. "We been up to Simmons', and Alpheus said you was thin and peaked and looked sick.
Said you bought sass'prilla and all kind of truck. He was afraid you had fever and was out of your head, crusin' round in the rain with no umbrella. The gang weren't talkin' of nothin' else, so me and Bailey thought we'd come right down."

"That's kind of you, I'm sure. Take your things off and set down. No; I'm sorry to disappoint Smalley and the rest, but I'm able to be up and—er—make my own bed, thank you. So Alpheus thought I looked thin, hey?
Well, if I had to live on that soup he sold me I'd be thinner'n I am now.
You tell him that canned hot water is all right if you like it, but it seems a shame to put mud in it. It only changes the color and don't help the taste."

Mr. Bangs, who was still staring at Emily, now ventured a remark.
"Is that a relation of yours, Cy?" he asked.

"That? Oh! Well, no, not exactly.
And yet I don't know but she is. Fellers, this is Emmie Thomas. Can't you shake hands, Emmie?"

The child rose, laid down the magazine, which was opened at the colored picture of a group of ladies in crinoline and chignons, and, going across the room, extended a hand to Mr. Tid-ditt.

"Why—er—how d'ye do? I'm pretty smart, thank you. How's yourself?"

"I'm better now. I guess the sass-parilla was good for me."

"Twan't the sass'prilla," observed the captain with conviction. "Twas the 'Arabian balsam.' Ma always cured me with it, and there's nothin' finer."

"But what in time?" began Bailey.
Captain Cy glanced at the child and then at the clock.

"Don't you think you'd better turn in now, Emmie?" he said hastily, cutting off the remainder of the Bangs query. "It's after 8, and when I was little I was abed afore that."

Emily obediently turned, gathered up the Lady's Books and replaced them in the closet. Then she went to the dining room and came back with a hand lamp.

"Good night," she said, addressing the visitors. Then, coming close to the captain, she put her face up for a kiss.

As Bailey told Asaph afterward, move no. And him rich?"

"Niece?" repeated Mrs. Simpson eagerly. "Who said 'twas his niece?
I heard 'twas a child he'd adopted out of a home. There's all sorts of queer yarns about it. Oh, good mornin', Cap'n Cyrus! How do you do?" The captain granted an answer to the effect that he was bearing up pretty well, considering. There was a swoon on his face and he spoke little as, holding Emily by the hand, he led the way home. That evening he dropped in at the perfect boarding house and begged to know if Mrs.
Bangs had any "fashion books" around that she didn't want.

"I mean—er—magazines with pictures of women's duds in 'em," he stammered in explanation. "Bos'n likes to look at 'em. She's great on fashion books, Bos'n is."

Keturah got together a half dozen numbers of the Home Dressmaker and other periodicals of a similar nature.
The captain took them under his arm and departed, whispering to Mr. Tid-ditt as he passed the latter in the hall:

"Come up by and by, Ase. I want to talk to you. Bring Bailey along, if you can do it without startin' divorce proceedings."

Later, when the trio gathered in the Whittaker sitting room, Captain Cy produced the "fashion books" and spoke concerning them.

"You see," he said, "I—I've been thinkin' that Bos'n—Emily, that is—wasn't rigged exactly the way she ought to be. Have you fellers noticed it?"

His friends seemed surprised. Neither was ready with an immediate answer, so the captain went on.

"Course I don't mean she ain't got canvases enough to cover her spars," he explained, "but what she has got has been considerable weather, and it seemed to me 'twas pretty high time to haul her into drydock and refit.
That's why I borrowed these magazines of Keturah. I've been lookin' them over, and there seems to be plenty of riggin' for small craft. The only thing is I don't know what's the right cut for her build. Bailey, you're a married man. You ought to know somethin' about women's clothes.
What do you think of this, now?"

He opened one of the magazines and pointed to the picture of a young girl, with a waspy waist and lilliputian feet, who, arrayed in flounces and furbelows, was toddling gingerly down a flight of marble steps. She carried a parasol in one hand, and the other held the end of a chain to which a long haired dog was attached.

The town clerk and his companion inspected the young lady with deliberation and interest.

"Well, what do you say?" demanded Captain Cy.

"I don't care much for them kind of dogs," observed Asaph thoughtfully.

"Good land! You don't s'pose they heave the dog in with the clothes for good measure, do you? Bailey, what's your opinion?"

"Mr. Bangs looked wise."

"I should say," he said—"yes, sir, I should say that was a real stylish rig-out. Only thing is that girl is considerably less fleshy than Emily. This one looks to me as if she was breakin' in two amidsips. Still, I s'pose likely the duds don't come ready made, so they could be let out some to fit.
What's the price of a suit like that,
Whit?"

"Afternoon gown for miss of sixteen" he read. "Humph! That settles that first crack. Bos'n ain't but half of anyway."

"Anyhow," put in Asaph, "you need somethin' she could wear forenoons if she wanted to. What's this one? She looks young enough."

The "one" referred to turned out to be a "coat for child of four." It was therefore scornfully rejected. One after another the different magazines were examined and the pictures discussed. At length a "costume for miss of eight years" was pronounced to be pretty nearly the thing.

"Godfrey scissors!" exclaimed the admirer Mr. Tidditt. "That's mighty swell, ain't it? What's the stuff goes into that, Cy?"

"Material, batiste, trimmed with embroidered batiste." What in time is batiste?"

"I don't know. Do you, Bailey?"

"No, never heard of it. Keturah never had nothin' like that. I'm sure, French, I shouldn't wonder. Well, Keturah's down on the French ever since she read about Napoleon leavin' his first wife to take up with another woman. Does it say any more?"

"Let's see. 'Makes a beautiful gown for evening or summer wear.' Summer! Why, by the big dipper, we're aground again! Bos'n don't want summer clothes. It's comin' on winter."

He threw the magazine on the floor, rubbed his forehead and then burst into a laugh.

"For goodness sake, don't tell anybody about this business, boys!" he said. "I guess I must be havin' an early spring of second childhood. But when I heard those women at the meetin' house goin' on about how pretty Licia Atkins was got up and how mean and shabby Bos'n looked it made me bile. And, by the big dipper, I will show 'em somethin' afore I get through too! Only dresin' little girls is some of my usual course.
Bailey, does Keturah make her own duds?"

"Why, no! Course she helps and stands by for orders, but Effie Taylor comes and takes the wheel while the rigin' goin' on. Effie's a dressmaker and—"

"There! See, Ase? It is some good to have a married man aboard, after all. A dressmaker's what we want.
I'll hunt up Effie tomorrow."

To The Makers of Maple Sugar

We are wondering if you have ever seen one of the ## Improved Monarch Evaporators?

If not it is time you had. If such a rig as the Monarch was built a thousand miles from here you would think you must see one, representing as it does the latest development in Maple Sugar Making appliance. Our new Catalog tells you a good deal about it, but you can't appreciate the many advantages the Monarch possesses over other rigs until you have seen the goods themselves.

If you are needing a new Boiling Outfit get in touch with us by Phone or Letter just as soon as you possibly can. Call by phone if you want to make a date to come and see us and we will pay the toll. We can accept orders for a few more Monarch Red Band Non-Wedding Buckets, but ought to have such orders soon.
